“I chose to begin my university studies at St. Peter’s College because it seemed like a good transition from high school to university. It was!”

Going to a smaller school was a better choice for me coming from a small town. The small class sizes reminded me of high school, but with harder work. This way it was easier for me to get used to the heavier workload and develop those skills I needed. Smaller class sizes also mean that it’s easier to get in contact with the professor and ask for help.

Since there aren’t as many students, the professors really get to know us, and they care about us and want us to do well. It’s also easier to make friends here because you see the same people all the time and get to connect with people in the same classes as you because they are small.”

“My choice to begin my studies at St. Peter’s College was because the main campus was intimidating in my mind. St. Peter’s College caught my interest, as it offered a smaller work environment and class sizes, plus I had the chance to spend another year paying less expenses while staying at home.”

I took advantage of the variety of entrance scholarships that St. Peter’s College has to offer. I ended up earning one of the Clem and Hedy Gerwing scholarships and put it all towards my tuition for the year and car repairs.

Something that numerous people may not know about the college is that the St. Peter’s College Fitness Center is often used, but I have never seen more than 5 individuals in it at any given time, making the equipment always accessible while exercising in a quiet environment.”

“One of my favorite parts about campus was just how easy it was to make friends. It’s a small campus so there is lots of opportunities to make friends and hangout with new people. It was also nice to just walk the grounds and take time to relax during busy schedules.”

One of my biggest fears in starting university was probably the amount of work. I didn’t know how hard things were going to be so it was nice to just ease in.

I chose to study education at St. Peter’s College because of the unique experience where we could go into schools. It was really cool because if I was on the main campus I wouldn’t be getting into schools until my second year. Being a first year university student and actually going into the schools and seeing it first-hand was really cool.

Being a St. Peter’s College student, the biggest thing I enjoyed was hanging out with people, making new friends, and being able to start out my university journey in this nice small place.”

"I chose to begin my studies at St. Peter's College because of the small size of classes and because it's easier for me to transition from a different country to Canada.

The main benefit of choosing St. Peter's College is you get an opportunity to communicate with your professors and get better understanding as you don't have to have a huge class.

My advice to any internal student coming to school in Saskatchewan is to stop at their first year in St. Peter's College because it's an easier transition for you and it's easier for you to settle down than in the city at the U of S."
